For Brunswick, NY Town Council

Jennifer Mann, candidate for Brunswick Town Council, believes that the Council should represent everyone in our community. A homestead farmer slowly bringing one of Brunswick's historic farms back to life, Mann is seeking innovative ways of reinvigorating the agricultural landscape in Brunswick by working together with local farmers to find solutions.

"It's important that Brunswick finds agriculturally based solutions for restoring our fallow farms to financial sustainability to prevent them from being lost to development. As a Town Council member, I will represent the community and work to maintain Brunswick's rural character into the future."

Having chosen Brunswick for raising her family, Jennifer Mann is on the advisory board of her daughters' pre-school, is a founding member of an elementary school co-op, and volunteers seasonally at our local Laughing Earth farm.

"My family has embraced a rural lifestyle that has long been valued in our country. I'm running for Town Council to keep this lifestyle choice an option in our own community."

Jennifer worked for a decade as a medical researcher, then earned a PhD from Princeton that focused on ancient Greek political theory. She has prioritized time with her family while her kids are young, but now she is eager to serve the wider Brunswick community. Mann's academic and professional experience has brought her to live in many diverse regions and neighborhoods across the country and she believes this is one of her best assets:

"As a Town Council member I will bring a new perspective, a jolt of energy and a fresh voice to Brunswick's local government. I am confident that I can work successfully with the current Town Supervisor and Council."

Jennifer Mann is politically independent, supported in her campaign by friends and neighbors of diverse political viewpoints. She will be respectful and responsive to the views and needs of all of Brunswick's citizens.
